

Employment Opportunities in the Grampians Health Network

The Grampians Region covers an area of 47,980 square kilometers and extends east to west from Bacchus Marsh to the South Australian border, and north to south from Patchewollock to Lake Bolac. In 2006 it had an estimated population of about 216, 000 people. The Grampians health network is made up of 12 hospital-based health services, five bush nursing centres, two stand-alone community health centres and one stand-alone district nursing service. Many of the health care organisations in the Grampians region have multiple campuses

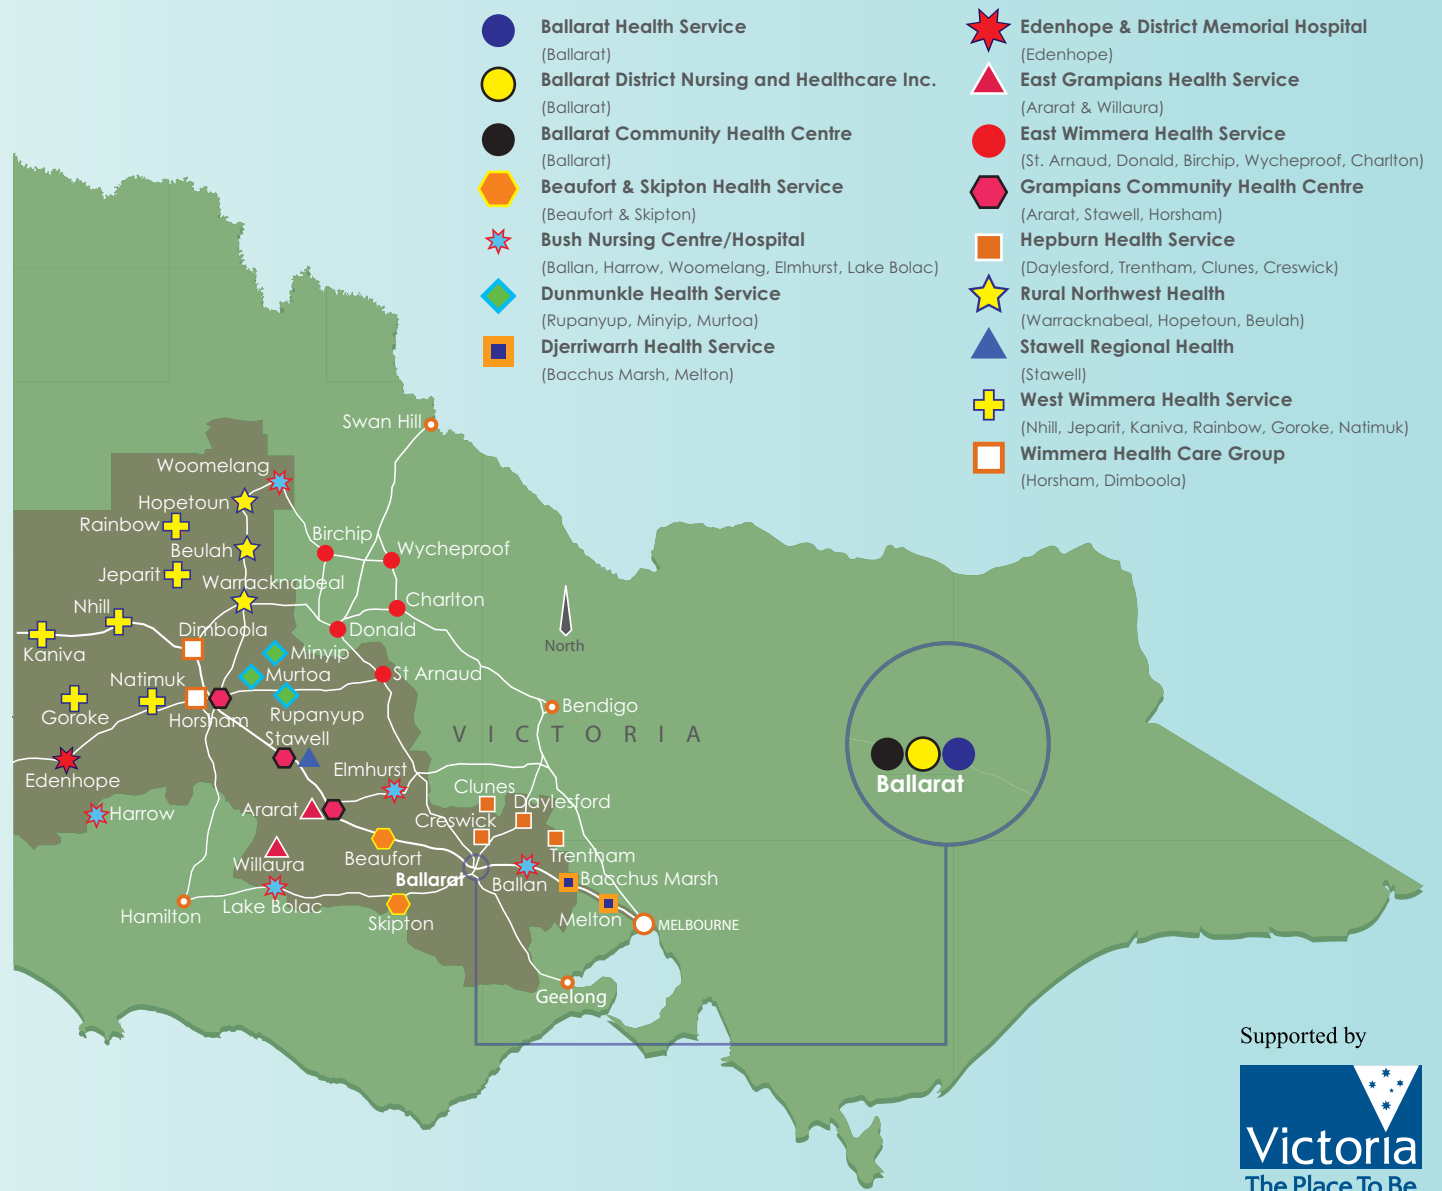

Health services in the Grampians health network often have employment opportunities for nurses and allied health professionals. If you are interested in working in the region and enjoying the benefits of a rural lifestyle, contact one of the health services listed in this brochure. For further details of job opportunities in the region go to www.grampianshealth.org.au or contact one of the following Department of Human Services workforce coordinators.
